Tracey Sanders is a professional photographer living in Northern Ontario. She has embraced the world of digital fine art photography to express her creative vision. Tracey combines nearly two decades of conventional artistic training and practice with the digital photography medium. Her goal is to explore all the potential digital photography presents.

When not working, Tracey's passion is exploring northern communities and wilderness in remote areas, searching for images to capture and share. She photographs man-made objects usually found abandoned, often the only evidence that a home or community once existed.

With her photographic and digital creative skills, she brings out powerful and personal emotions which blend the past and present in unique photographic works of art.

Tracey has spent many hours photographing a variety of live events for business and not-for-profit organizations. As well, she has provided personal and business portraits for many clients for both electronic and print formats.

Her photos have been featured in Ontario based and national publications, and she was a featured contributor in two annual Greater Sudbury Chamber of Commerce Voice of Business Publications.

As well her photographs have been presented in the Sudbury Star, Northern Life and Northern Ontario Business.

Currently, Tracey's artistic works hang in several homes and private collections throughout Ontario.
